RecordClick.com Announces Launch of New Service: Addition of Forensic Genealogy Research Helps Solve Ancestry Issues that Demand More Stringent Documentation

RecordClick.com Adds Forensic Genealogy to Its Research Services Roster

Denville, NJ – In addition to its traditional family genealogy offerings, RecordClick.com now offers forensic genealogy research services to its customers, who include, in part, genealogy tree researchers, family historians, and genealogists. RecordClick's professional staff of genealogists conducts research for situations requiring a stricter policy of proof. Such situations may involve verifying heirs and beneficiaries for veterans' and pension benefits, supplying evidence for probate and estate cases, solving adoption cases, and locating the next-of-kin for unclaimed decedents. Forensic and traditional genealogy services, as well as DNA testing are now available through the company's website at www.RecordClick.com.

Like DNA genetic testing, forensic genealogy is a fast-growing branch of genealogy. When an ancestral link is needed between the past and present, forensic genealogy may be used to assist attorneys, law enforcement, and federal and state agencies. Professional genealogists and non-professional family genealogy researchers, as well as genealogy tree builders are finding increasingly that many ancestry-related court cases require documented evidence that is held to stricter standards of proof than those accepted in "regular" genealogy cases. Demand for forensic genealogy services is on the rise from genealogists, as well as from family genealogy researchers.

Elizabeth Khan, Founder and Chief Executive Officer of RecordClick.com explains, "We were getting a lot of calls from customers who needed documentation that would be accepted as definitive proof for certain ancestry situations, such as heir and beneficiary verification, adoption confirmation, requirements for dual citizenship by jus sanguinis, and other immigration corroboration. We jumped at the chance to serve our customers by making DNA testing and forensic genealogy research services available to them."

Prior to offering forensic genealogy services, RecordClick.com added DNA testing services to its roster of research offerings. DNA analysis is one of the three most important sources of forensic genealogy, along with photo analysis, and database diving.
